Her artistic circulation is at a very young stage, since, after graduating, she dedicated much of her time to the area of investigation of design, development and execution of educational projects in the field of art and culture where she managed communication, dialogue, cooperation and exchange of techniques between professionals involved in the art field; the cultural politics and management in institutions such as The Superior Academy of the Arts in Bogota, Colombia and the former Institute of Tourism and Culture of the Capital District.

She has also expanded her career teaching Plastic Arts in various universities in Bogota, Colombia, such as "Fundacion Universitaria Los Libertadores," where she was in charge of the cultural negotiation for the college community from the College Center of Culture and Wellbeing. She was also in charge of instructing pictorial techniques, decoration of plastic arts and art history.
